WHAT DOCTOR HAHNEMANN HAS GIVEN TO US

For a perfect cure of a disease, we must have an idea of what it is, wherefrom it causes, how it attacks a living body and on what law it attacks different living bodies in different forms.

From ancient time, the forest dwelling men and women only thought of curing a deformity or derangement of the body by particular saps of leaves collected from the forest probably from a self-inspired instinct, as is still prevalent in the animals and aboriginals. Dogs and cats are found to chew a type of grass, when their stomach becomes upset. A python snake knows the bark of a certain tree, which it takes when it devours a large animal filling it's stomach extensively as if to burst. A mongoose also knows some plants as a sure remedy for snakebite. Later on, when the aboriginal people came to be little civilised, village men and women could find out various remedial plants for fever, cough and cold, menstrual irregularities, delivery troubles and even to induce others to be under their command. They also knew plants, the saps of which could heal up skin condition after a burn.

All these ideas were only to heal up the deformities and derangements of body by any natural matter. The first scientific knowledge of cure also was based on the idea of making up of a wound or curing the diseased condition of ailments in different organs of the body only by studying the effects of selected juice or some chemical on particularised organ of an animal in the laboratory and circulating the material proved to be efficacious in a particular disfunction of a physical organ or a diseased condition produced in the body-organ from a disease particularly named after generalisation of certain syndromes. As the science progresses, the same idea of cure is being followed to find out the diseased part in the body by different tests of body discharges and by examination of the physique under different mechanical aids and to arrange to give well known chemical materials previously found effective for similar disease in the similar part, by oral and injectable manners. So THE PRINCIPLE OF 'CURE' AS ENVISAGED IN THE MODERN MEDICINE, IS ONLY TO REPAIR A DISEASED CONDITION NOT KNOWING WHETHER THE DISEASE-CREATING-AGENT IS REMOVED FROM THE DISEASED BODY OR NOT. THE SURGICAL CURE IS INVARIABLY SHOWING THAT THE DISEASE ELEMENT HAD NOT GONE FROM THE BODY, ONLY

THE DEFORMED PART IS REMOVED OR REPAIRED. When a malignant ulceration in a female breast is surgically treated, the whole breast is removed by operation, but the propensity of tumour formation (the disease) is not gone and it remains to form a tumour in the existing breast. The same is true in removal of a calculi by surgical operation.

It seems strange that the German born HAHNEMANN, who became eager for medical education (probably from an inspiration working within him) thought that the prevalent method for cure of a disease was defective and not perfect. He went so far to declare that many of the diseases, so far cured by the prevalent method could have been cured by itself ie. from the reaction within the body. It may be guessed that the existence of a force for driving away the disease was being felt withing him in an obscure manner.

The thought continued within Hahnemann and he felt an inner inspiration (as he stated more than once) to find out the real perfect curative process. As have been seen in every pursuit of the great inventors, the searching thought paved the way from him, and at last he found culmination in the CINCHONA proving in his own body. Here he found the truth that the element, a product of nature, which is used as a remedy for cure of a disease could produce that same and similar disease in a healthy human body.

The inference, therefore comes that the NATURE HAS IN ITS PLANTS AND OTHER PRODUCTS THE CURATIVE POWER OF REMOVAL OF SYMPTOMS PRODUCED IN HUMAN BODY BY A DISEASE, AND IT HAS ALSO THE POWER OF PRODUCING THE SAME AND SIMILAR SYMPTOMS OF THE SAME DISEASE IN ITS HERBAL AND OTHER PRODUCTS ADMINISTERED AS CURATIVE AGENT. IN SHORT, NATURE? BY ITS PRODUCTS, CAN CREATE A DISEASE IN THE LIVING HUMAN BODY AND IT CAN ALSO CURE THE SAME AND SIMILAR DISEASE PRODUCED BY OTHER ELEMENT OF THE NATURE.

By this hypothesis, we can come the three fourth way in the theory of formation and cure of a disease under a definite law and the law is recognised by Modern Science METABOLISM AND CATABOLISM

GO TOGETHER.

Now to complete the law of formation and cure of a DISEASE in a human body, we are yet to know the 'element' which forms the disease, Hahnemann found the element to be a FORCE in the nature, which as INIMICAL FORCE, attacks the VITAL FORCE in human body controlling the function of the organs of a body as metabolic process and, deranges the functions of those organs by part to produce some symptoms in the external body which is called the disease. This is CATABOLIC Process.

Dr. Hahnemann went further to put the LAW on a firm basis by replacing the word CURE by REMOVAL OF THE DISEASE FORCE (So far called inimical force, the force of Catabolic process) making the diseased body free of disease and bringing back to its former health. This is totally different from the idea of CURE by modern medicines meaning the repair of diseased organ as explained in the beginning.

The process of the REMOVAL OF THE DISEASE has been fully explained by potentisation of the drug from nature which means converting the remedial agent to power or force which, when administered as a force stronger than the disease force can overthrow the disease force from the vital force. It could further be proved that the disease, on removal, goes away from the centre to the periphery.

Now the total LAW OF DISEASE AND CURE is fully enunciated as the general rule of life on earth ie a human body after birth is gradually developed in the nature and decay follows the development in another way, as disease. For a man has to die after a length of life on earth. The process of decay is called DISEASE, which comes from the nature as a DISEASE FORCE. The nature has in its products agents which, when potentised (turned to force), is administered to totally remove the DISEASE FORCE and make the diseased body free of the disease and bring it back to its former health.

This is a most scientific Law given by Dr. Hahnemann and it is totally different from simple cure, as contemplated in the modern medical science.

But, most of the modern thinkers, who are compelled to reckon the modern medical process as most scientific for it's enchanting diagnostic process, can never accept the theory propagated by Dr. Hahnemann as scientific, as this can not be proved in the laboratory. But such people (even the modern government of many-countries) should think anew that the whole phenomenon envisaged in the Hahnemann method happen in a living body, and as such, it can not be proved in a laboratory process. ●
