

A CASE OF PRIMARY STERILITY

Dr. Uttareshwar Pachegaonkar
Ambajogai

Patient's Name- SBO.

Age-24 years. Housewife.

Chief Complaints- Primary sterility. Married since 3 years with no conception so far. Intermittent abdominal pain by warming, by bending backward, by stooping forward, while walking. Mass in right hypochondrium and epigastric region since 4 years apparently caused by weight lifting. Abdominal pain is dull aching and/or of shock like. Radiologists have opined that the epigastric mass is of encysted haematoma on the basis of Ultrasonographical and other investigations. Lymphadenitis in right inguinal region without any apparent cause. Colicky pain on and off at various locations in abdomen. Chronic coryza with fluent watery discharge by exposure to cold wind and by dust. Cough spasmodic by sip of water. Dysmenorhea with 28days/5days cycles with sever spasmodic pain in abdomen on 1st day of menstruation. Gynaecologists have investigated the case and attributed the sterility to tubal block caused extensive fibrosis in both tubes. Salpingoplasty has been advised by Gynaecologist. Past history of acute intestinal obstruction caused by intussusception at iliocaecal junction averted by emergency surgery. The scar of this surgery now has itching and irritation.
